

Dermaplaning — Service Knowledge Document

What It Is

Dermaplaning is a manual exfoliation technique that uses a sterile surgical scalpel to gently remove dead skin cells and vellus hair (peach fuzz) from the face. It's a non-invasive treatment that reveals smoother, brighter skin instantly with zero downtime.

How it works:

- Trained esthetician uses a precision blade at a 45-degree angle
- Removes top layer of dead skin and fine facial hair
- Reveals fresh, healthy skin underneath
- Creates smooth canvas for makeup and skincare
- Stimulates cell turnover

What it treats:

- Dull, rough skin texture
- Fine vellus hair (peach fuzz)
- Dry, flaky skin
- Uneven skin tone
- Clogged pores
- Fine lines and wrinkles
- Acne scarring (mild)

Key benefits:

- Instant smoothness and glow
- Better makeup application
- Enhanced product penetration (up to 5x better)
- Removes peach fuzz
- No chemicals, just mechanical exfoliation
- Safe for most skin types
- Zero downtime

Who Should NOT Get It

Avoid dermaplaning if you have:

- Active acne breakouts or cystic acne
- Active cold sores or herpes outbreak
- Inflamed or sunburned skin
- Open wounds, cuts, or abrasions
- Severe rosacea or eczema flare-up
- Recent Accutane use (within 6 months)

Postpone treatment if you:

- Recently had laser treatments (wait 2-4 weeks)
- Just had chemical peels (wait 2 weeks)
- Have uncontrolled diabetes (increases healing time)
- Are on blood thinners (may increase sensitivity)

Common concerns addressed:

- "Will my hair grow back thicker/darker?" NO! This is a myth. Vellus hair (peach fuzz) will grow back the same texture and color.
- Safe for most skin tones including darker skin (doesn't cause hyperpigmentation like some treatments)

FAQs

Will my hair grow back thicker or darker? Absolutely not! This is the #1 myth about dermaplaning. Vellus hair (peach fuzz) has a tapered end. When it grows back, it may feel slightly blunt at first, but it will NOT be thicker, darker, or coarser. It grows back exactly the same.

Does it hurt? Not at all! Most people find it relaxing. You'll feel a gentle scraping sensation but no pain. Many clients say it's even soothing.

How is this different from shaving? Dermaplaning is performed by a trained professional at a precise angle to exfoliate skin AND remove hair. It's a medical-grade treatment. Shaving only cuts hair at skin level and doesn't exfoliate.

Can I do this at home? We don't recommend it. Professional dermaplaning requires training, sterile surgical blades, and proper technique. At-home tools aren't the same and can cause cuts or irritation.

How often should I get dermaplaning? Every 3-4 weeks is ideal. This aligns with your skin's natural cell turnover cycle and hair regrowth.

Can I get this with active acne? Not on areas with active breakouts. We can dermaplane around acne, but inflamed or cystic acne is a contraindication. Once acne clears, dermaplaning can help with texture and scarring.

Will I break out after? Breakouts are rare but can happen if you: use dirty makeup brushes, touch your face excessively, skip SPF, or introduce new products too soon. Following aftercare instructions prevents this.

Can I wear makeup the same day? Yes! Many clients get dermaplaning before events specifically for flawless makeup application. Just ensure brushes and products are clean.

What about the sun? Your skin will be more sensitive to UV after exfoliation. SPF is ESSENTIAL for at least 3-5 days (but you should wear it daily anyway!).

Should I get dermaplaning or a chemical peel? Different goals! Dermaplaning is immediate smoothness with zero downtime. Chemical peels penetrate deeper and may cause peeling for days. You can also do both (not on the same day).

Can darker skin tones get dermaplaning? Yes! Unlike some treatments, dermaplaning is safe for all skin tones and doesn't cause hyperpigmentation.
